Sarah Young

Art has always been an important part of my life. I've been drawing since before I can remember. I studied fine arts in painting and drawing at UW, and my background has most extensively been with oils and acrylics.

After graduating from the UW in December 2010, I embarked with my boyfriend on a month-long bike trip down the west coast, in which we encountered all the beauty, challenge and adventure one could ask for from the humble seat of our leg-powered vehicles. The scenery depicted in my paintings is from that unforgettable experience. I also am fascinated with the two-dimensional design principles of Native northwest coast art, and enjoy exploring their vast possibilities for representing movement in nature. As well as biking, I am an enthusiast of the outdoors, yoga, and Irish bagpipes.
